RSSeo
Posted by mismarketing - 2010/10/19 15:49

Hey Edwin.

I have my sitemap.xml set to copy. and it isnt. i looked in cute ftp and is shows its not symlinked, but it is.

http://www.heavensbestdemosite.com/tmp/sitemap_cttp.png

I try to edit it in the component RSseo and is shows this, which is my master site root:

http://www.heavensbestdemosite.com/tmp/symlink.png

I have jms setup to copy the file, but it isnt working.

http://www.heavensbestdemosite.com/tmp/symlink_setup.png

I need this to work. it is very important to have site specific sitemaps.

==========

Re: RSSeo
Posted by edwin2win - 2010/10/19 20:12

Ensure that you have each website deployed in a speciifc directory so that you could have the sitemap.xml specific for each slave site.

==========

Re:RSSeo
Posted by celso - 2011/04/06 03:41

Hi Edwin,

What do you mean about deployed slave site in a directory?... all sites are always in a directory for each.

I´ve got the same problem.

Thanks

==========

Re:RSSeo
Posted by edwin2win - 2011/04/06 09:00

This is not true that all site are ALWAYS in a directory for each.
If you don't setup correctly, the directory can be the master.

In most our tutorial video, we are setting up the "deploy folder" to have a specific directory. If you let the field empty, this is the master directory (not the slave site directory).

==========

Re:RSSeo

Posted by celso - 2011/04/06 12:14

_____

Thanks you very much!!!
I understod, thank you very much

==========