sexybookmarks plugin - not working currently

Posted by jadrake - 2011/02/21 21:06

Hi,

I'm trying (but failing) to use the sexybookmarks plugin (v1.1.0) with a slave site. I get the following error when it is enabled:

Warning: Invalid argument supplied for foreach() in /home/inthecit/public_html/plugins/content/sexybookmarks.php on line 424

The above error appears 6 times in succession.

Is there anything I can do to narrow down the error, or perhaps figure out why it's happening? I'd love to use a bookmarking plugin, to allow my visitors to recommend articles.

If I can't get this to work, can anyone recommend a bookmarking plugin that does work with Multisites?

Cheers,
Adam

==========

Re: sexybookmarks plugin - not working currently

Posted by edwin2win - 2011/02/22 12:51

This message is probably due to the fact that you don't have any menu defined in the slave with an "article".

So try creating a menu with an article.

This error message is due to the fact that the plugin does not find any menu corresponding to the "com_content" (joomla article) extension .

The test that I did was OK and this extension should work.

==========

Re: sexybookmarks plugin - not working currently

Posted by jadrake - 2011/02/22 22:00

You, sir, are a GOD among men!

Thank you. The solution was perfect. I created a random article, and a random (non-viewable) menu item pointing to said article, and the bookmarks work perfectly.

Did I say thank you?!

Adam

==========