My slave sites already exist

Posted by moonie - 2011/01/24 13:43

Hi appologies if this question has already been asked and answered?

I already have a portfolio of existing joomla sites each with their own joomla installs, databases and admin areas etc. I would love to be able to controll their contentr in one place rather than adding articles accross the multiple sites installs. Is it possible to use Jms2win + Jms content for multisites to feed relevant articles out to a specificly selected site, the existing sites would be the slaves and i would create a new site with jms2win as the master?

Any help or advice would be greatly apreciated.

Thanks

==========

Re: My slave sites already exist

Posted by edwin2win - 2011/01/24 17:32

The article sharing for JMS is a component that allows reading a displaying the articles coming from any websites defined under JMS Multisites.

So when you are using the Article Sharing for JMS, you really share the article that does not need to be replicated or added in the other site as you reading the same content.

==========