ok, this appears to be an issue with a redirect extension and jms2win multisites. IE just blows through the error, firefox intermitently shows it, or the error is at the top of the page, or it does not show at all.

please please help and advise. the extension is ReDJ . its a nice redirect extension. he has been trying to help me.

http://www.sistemistica.it/forum/11-redj-in-english/670-works-for-html-not-for-php-pages-help.html

we have had email conversations that extend past the forum posts. it does not appear to be only php related. the redirect works great if we go to a totaly new domian. in the instant case, we go from the MASTER site to a slave site /us for instance. the master is the only place where the extension is installed, as this is the only place where redirects are required. any and all help is greatly needed and appreciated.

an example is http://www.hi-lite.com/airportMarkings.php in fire fox, you will get the error, every 3 times or so. strange! how can we fix??!

Send us by email the "redirect" joomla extensino that you are using.
This will help us better understand what this extension is doing.

We have tried your URL http://www.hi-lite.com in both Firefox 3.0.15 and IE 8 and we don't had encountered any problem.

We have found your ReDJ extension and be able to see your error message hidden in the 301 mode redirection.
To see the error message, we have used a TCP traffic analyzer. Otherwise the browser process correctly the "301" html move statement.

We don't know which code add this error message.
The only solution that we see is that you add debuging traces in the code to try identify which peace of code create this side effect.

All we can tell you is that ReDJ redirect to another url with a statement "header" that may not work if another extension has started writte something on the screen before this plugin.

You probably have to check that this is the first plugin that is executed.
Start joomla use more sophisticated algorithm when they have to redirect in case where something is already displayed.

Perhaps that your error message comes form the fact that another extension has display content before the ReDJ plugin.
